Opening Remarks

6

Some of the freshest thinking in economics is decades old. For new ideas, dismal scientists are turning to the Depression-era insights of John Maynard Keynes and Friedrich Hayek

Global Economics

9

Power in the people

Countries with fast-rising working-age populations will be the future economic growth leaders

- Diamond smuggling thrives in Zimbabwe p11
- Mao nostalgia in China p12
- Why that 101st employee is such a problem in India p13
- Singapore's Prime Minister on the U.S. and China p13
- Seven days ahead p14

Companies & Industries

16

Cash in Big Oil's trash

BP, Shell, and others are getting top prices for properties they thought they'd struggle to unload

- DuPont: CEO Kullman's bet p17
- Universal Music hopes for a buzz from American Idol p18
- How cell providers get rich serving the poor p19
- Marilyn Monroe and others are resurrected by marketers p20
- Briefs p21

Politics & Policy

22

Is it safe to hire again?

U.S. companies won't add workers in earnest until they're convinced the recovery is real

- The Administration's internal debate on tax reform p24
- Bill Daley, fixer-in-chief p25
- A shaky start for high-risk insurance pools p26
- China comes to do deals p27

Technology

28

Microsoft, only Kinect!

The gaming accessory offers the tech giant a rare opportunity to harness the enthusiasm of hackers

- A weird and wonderful CES p30
- iPhone: The pros and cons of Verizon vs. AT&T p31
- Charlie Rose talks to Verizon CEO Ivan Seidenberg p32
- Speeding up gene research p34

Markets & Finance

36

Playing the rumor mill

The jump in stock prices of companies named in takeover chatter is often short-lived

- Big banks, big legal bills p37
- Morgan Stanley has something to prove p38
- Why a housing rebound won't lift the economy p39
- The stock-bond hybrid that burned investors p40
- Bid & Ask: The week's deals p42

Enterprise

45

Healthy new business

Vending-machine startups are offering schools something besides potato chips and cookies

- When it comes to IRS audits, size matters p46
- Why St. Louis beer fans are drinking more Schlafly p47
- Brett King on what small business needs from banks p47
- A D&B spin-off for the Internet age p48

Shooting star The Glock is simple, quick-firing, and utterly reliable

Features

50

America's Gun

How Glock became the weapon of choice for U.S. cops, gun enthusiasts, and mass killers like alleged Tucson gunman Jared Loughner p50

Unmasking Chinese Fakes

When a retiree in Texas discovered that some mainland companies listed in the U.S. are frauds, he unleashed an army of short-sellers p58

Home Depot's Fix-It Lady

Chief Financial Officer Carol Tomé has a chance at becoming the next CEO—if she can help drag the company's technology into the 21st century p64

Etc.

69

Danger, Will Robinson! Your Cubemate is a Robot
Tomorrow's office is likely to include workers that are smarter, faster, more responsible—and not human

- Food Gay sports bars are popping up around the U.S., and cleaning up p72
- Next Life Former Hong Kong banker Jose Cortes turned a passion for African wildlife into a business adventure p74
- One True Thing Fitness gear for New Year's resolution keeper and gym rat alike p75
- Office Lab Your purse is talking about you. A guide to what it's saying p76
- The Stack In American Plastic, Sociologist Laurie Esseg traces Americans' fixation back to Reagan-era tax cuts and deregulation and rising economic insecurity p78
